The figure displays three distinct fractal patterns constructed from asterisks (*). The first pattern on the left is a Sierpinski triangle, which is a self-similar shape formed by recursively removing smaller triangles from a larger one. The middle pattern is a variation of a Sierpinski triangle, possibly a Sierpinski carpet or a different iteration, showing a more complex arrangement of removed areas. The third pattern on the right is another variation, appearing as a more intricate, interconnected fractal structure. All three patterns exhibit self-similarity at multiple scales.
